Hosenmatz is a pattern for casual baggy baby pants in Fingering-weight yarns. They offer a lot of room to move and kick and even parents using cloth diapers for their little ones will find these suiting the large “package”. The pants are knitted from the top down in rounds and the long cuffs can be folded down first and later be used as an elongation so Hosenmatz will grow with your child. In the largest size, the pants stay put during first locomotion adventures due to a (secured) cord in the belly cuff.

Legs:

Knit all stitches until you reach the bind off edge, place next 67 (71, 75, 79) stitches for the right leg on scrap yarn or holder without knitting them, join for the round for the left leg and knit to end (place stitches evenly on double-pointed needles or two circular needles).

— 67 (71, 75, 79) sts

Continue in stockinette stitch until leg measures 7 (9, 13, 20) cm.

Next round: decrease 11 (11, 11, 11) stitches evenly spaced — 56 (60, 64, 68) sts

Next round: k to end

Next round: decrease 12 (12, 16, 16) stitches evenly spaced — 44 (48, 48, 52) sts

Cuff:

Next rounds: k2, p2, repeat until you reach the marker, repeat until cuff measures 3.5 (3.5; 3.5; 4.5) cm

Next round: k to end

Next rounds: k2, p2 repeat until cuff measures 7 (7, 7, 9) cm

Loosely bind off all stitches. You might want to try Jeny's surprisingly stretchy bind off method:
<http://www.lanade.de/blog/hosenmatz>

Knit second leg just like the first one.

Finishing:

Darn in loose ends and sew together bind off edges for the crotch. Now soak in lukewarm water, roll it in a towel to lose excess water (do not press too hard) and lay it out to dry completely. Enjoy! :)
